Milwaukee Sealed By Troops

MILWAUKEE, Wis, (UPI)—Almost 6,000 national guardsmen and police shut Milwaukee down tight today under a drastic 24hour curfew to curb a wave of Negro rioting, sniper at-tacks, arson and looting.

Sporadic violence shattered an uneasy daytime calm after a wild night in which two persons, one a policeman, were killed, at least 83 persons injured and 180 persons arrested.

The city's highways were closed, its businesses shut down and its residents directed to stay at home.

Guardsmen commanded by two-gun general sealed off a 105 square-block area on the near north side—the heart of the "inner core" Negro neighbor-hood—and patrolled the debris-strewn streets in jeeps.

Testing the Wind

Mr. Jean Lesage, had by the weekend cautiously begun to establish their positions in relation to the tempest raised by the visit of President de Gaulle.

Mr. Lesage was, on balance, much the more forthright of the two but he had the easier role, not having been directly involved with the problems raised by the French head of state's tour of the province. And, even while coming out strongly as an anti-separatist, Mr. Lesage was careful not to reproach General de Gaulle for encouraging separatist sentiments. The blame was all Mr. Johnson's, the Liberal leader claimed, for giving the President bad advice and misleading him as to the true temper of French-Cana-

This doesn't square with what French government spokesmen in Paris had already said, that General de Gaulle's words and actions were deliberate and part of his own policy toward French Canada and what its place should be in the world. But for Mr. Lesage it would have been politically unwise to attack the President until there had been time for the majority of French-Canadians to clarify their thinking on the de Gaulle visit.

Premier Johnson in his statement replying to Mr. Lesage was ambiguous without being unduly repentant. He did not open the doorway further to encouragement dian nationalism among Frenchof separatist feelings, but neither Canadians.

TWO MAJOR POLITICAL LEAD- did he close it, and this state of ers of Quebec, Premier Daniel affairs is likely to persist until he, Johnson, and the former premier, too, has had longer to assess the public reaction to last week's events.

> The premier's interpretation of General de Gaulle's words is interesting. When he "spoke of emancipation, of Quebec taking its destinies into its own hands, of free Quebec," Mr. Johnson said, "he saluted this conviction, which is more and more that of the Quebec people, that it is free to choose its own destiny." Mr. Johnson refused to say whether he. himself, believed that this destiny lay within Confederation or out-

It is possible to perceive that Mr. Johnson hopes to use the De Gaulle visit to further strengthen the autonomy of Quebec. His government, he said, has as its objective 'a new constitution which will consecrate the juridical and political recognition of the French-Canadian nation and which confides to Quebec, taking account of the interdependence characteristic of our times, all competences necessary for the blossoming of its identity."

The premier's initial judgment would seem to be that President de Gaulle's tour had raised the level of French-Canadian nationalism to point which would greatly strengthen the Quebec government's position vis-a-vis Ottawa. Mr. Lesage's belief seems to be the opposite, that the French head of state's interference has strengthened Cana-

A Chance To Be Adult

COMMITTEE HEADED BY A Mr. Justice Latey, a member of Britain's high court, has completed two years' study of British teen-agers, and has come up with the finding that they form "a first-class generation" and should be given the responsibilities of adults at age 18 instead of 21.

Of 12 members, only two, both of them men, dissented.

The results of intensive investigation, says the chairman, have presented a picture "very different from that which emerges from a hysterical concentration on the delinquent minority". He advises adults to stop "expecting the worst" of the young. The investigation and report did not concern itself with recommendations on a lower voting age. That is a subject reserved for another study of the election act.

It did, however, come out in favor of lowering to 18 the age at which young people can marry without parental consent, and proposed that they be accorded the rights of adults in such fields as acquiring mortgages for homes and purchasing large household requirements on credit, as well as being empowered to inherit property and to make a

The British committee seems to be attacking a paradox of the modern affluent society that was one target of Mr. Roul Tunley's criticism in his book "Kids, Crime and Chaos".

Discussing what he called the "adolescent limbo", Mr. Tunley noted: "On the one hand, we encourage adulthood in the young . . . But, on the other hand, although we hold up this glittering prize of adulthood constantly, at the same time we tell the male teen-ager that he must not really touch it for some time. We withhold the prerogatives of being an adult longer and longer."

Since they consider the present teen-agers a "first-class generation", the majority on the Latey committee would give positive recognition of the generation's character by extending to it adult responsibilities at an earlier age - a way out of what Mr. Tunley calls the "adolescent limbo."

Some people, of course, will never assume adult responsibility no matter what their age. But if the British committee is justified in its assessment of the young generation it has studied, the proposals appear constructive. Those denied the opportunity to assume responsibility have no chance to develop or prac-

Applying the Squeeze?

IN VIEW OF THE COMMITMENT of the organizers of the Bank of British Columbia to restrict sale of shares to individuals in the four Western provinces, it is rather astonishing to learn that Mr. Frank Trebell, the pro tem president, and Mr. Einar Gunderson, a director, have recently spent some days in the east in an attempt to interest several major corporations in investing in the bank.

According to The Financial Post, the companies approached included distilleries, breweries, natural resources companies and financial institutions such as life insurance firms, which do business in British the goodwill of the government of Columbia. And the approach was on the basis that for them to buy shares in the new bank would be 'good corporate citizenship".

The Trebell-Gunderson sales pitch has undoubtedly created a considerable dilemma for the top managements of the companies which have been approached. From the point of view of maximizing profits for their shareholders which is essentially management's job-an investment in the Bank of British Columbia is not attractive. Money spent to buy bank shares, which would not likely earn a return for a number of years, might more profitably be invested in the companies' own operations, in this province or elsewhere depending on opportunity. Normally one corporation does not buy the shares of another unless there is a merger or a take-over possible or unless they are in allied fields and a mutual benefit can be seen in an interlocking ownership.

But there is obviously something else to be gained - or lost - by a decision on corporate investment in the Bank of British Columbia. And particularly is this so for companies which are dependent in any way on this province which has put so much of its prestige behind the bank's

There is an element of not-toosubtle pressure here which the bank organizers should be required to comment on publicly when they next report their progress in attracting purchasers for the bank's shares. They might also give their definition of "good corporate citizenship" and explain whether this involves backing a new bank which the government badly wants or investing their funds in the direct development of their enterprises in this province.

Wolfe's Forecast and Canada's Future

ambassador to NATO and now chief

N a letter to his mother, written on August 11, 1759, General James Wolfe set down some thoughts about the country he was shortly to conquer. "This will," he wrote, "some time hence, be a vast Empire, the seat of Power and Learning. They have all the Materials ready. Nature has refus'd 'em nothing, and there will grow a people out of our little spot (England) that will fill this vast space,"and divide this great portion of the globe with the Spaniards . . . if we had been as lucky this Campaign as we had reason to expect . . . the cornerstone probably would have been laid of this high Fabrick."

In the year of Canada's 100th birthday, Wolfe's words are worth remembering. The "high Fabrick" he visualized remains to be achieved, but much has been accomplished. Many Canadians holding senior posts in government, diplomacy and the Groves of Academe are convinced that within the next 15 years or so Canada may assume the status of a great power, passing the foundling nations Britain and France in the process to rank closely behind the countries of decisive influence — the United States, the Soviet Union and Communist China.

In all future projections, the recurring considerations are vast resources and physical scale. Bigness is all. In the scientific age, "Lebensraum" becomes a crucial attribute, just as sheer size is critical in big industry. Possessing the largest land mass in the free world, Canada is obviously favored. It is one of the most sparsely populated countries in the world, with 40 per cent subarctic, freeing it from worries about the population explosion that is expected to double the world's numbers to six or seven billiion before the end of the

Dazzling Perspectives

A resources inventory opens dazzling perspectives. Canada has the largest untapped oil resources of any country. Enormous commercial resources of pulp and timber reserves remain unutilized in most provinces. Canada is and will be for a long time a net exporter of food. Its supplies of fresh water are such that it could become the "water baby" of the

Perhaps the fact has not yet been fully grasped that physical space, the big backyard, has become more important than ever before now that the age of colonialism, in all probability, is ending. In retrospect, it will be seen that one of the most striking developments has been ending of European hegemony the around the world. From the mid-15th century until early in the 20th century, Europe gradually spread its civilizing, commercial and military influence over four-fifths of the world. In the last 50 years, Europe's Retreat from Empire has restored the status quo ante. Europe is back at square one, introspective and preoccupied with earning its own living.

The crumbling of European influence the withdrawal of Britain, France, Portugal, Spain, Belgium and Germany most or all of their overseas domains - may be regarded in history's long perspective as even more important than the decline of the Roman empire 1.500 years ago.

Comparison With Belgium

Sixty years ago, Canada had the same population, about 7,000,000 as Belgium, although it was 300 times larger. Now Canada has nearly three times the population and an infinitely larger productive capacity. Within a measurable time, it is expected to pass Britain and France in gross national product and hence perhaps in global influence. The countries to watch in future, says French author Thierry Maulnier, are the United States, Soviet Union, China, India, Brazil, Canada and Australia. "Canada has before it a future as a great power that Belgium did not have, has not now and cannot have," said Maulnier, writing in the Paris magaizne La Revue des Deux Mondes

One of Belgium's leading statesmen Paul-Henri Spaak, would probably agree, He told friends recently that if he were still a young man, he would emigrate to Canada like a shot. He envisages it becoming something unique - a great power without enemies, for the first time in history.

Canada's prestige abroad has increased considerably since the Second World War. Occasionally rebuked for a goody-goody approach to international relations, it exerts increasing influence in such global institutions as the 26nation Commonwealth.

At the last two conferences. Commonwealth prime ministers held in Lagos and London, Prime Minister Lester Pearson emerged as the indispensable man in forging compromises between Britain on the one hand and the Afro-Asian nations on the other. Still No Treaty Check on Proliferation President Johnson and the Soviet draft treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons to other countries.

It was expected that this nonproliferation treaty would be jointly tabled by the American and Soviet delegations at the 18-power disarmament conference now in session in Geneva. But a month has now passed since the summit and the Geneva conference is still marking time. The reason for the delay is believed and Soviet delegations in Geneva some two months ago ofter the U.S. had had consultations with its NATO allies, especially West Germany. It was then agreed that the most contentious clause, Article 3, concerning the international inspection of nuclear power installations, should be left blank in the agreed draft and thrown open to wider discussion at the Geneva con-

NATO Approval

This policy was approved by the NATO countries, including West Germany, at the conference of NATO foreign ministers in Luxembourg in the middle of June. But meanwhile the Middle East war had created a new source of tension between the U.S. and the Soviet Union and had, in particular, profoundly staken the foundations of Soviet foreign and defence policies. The formal agreement from Moscow to the tabling of the draft non-proliferation treaty in Geneva was held up; the Geneva conference convened after a nothing to talk about. Then, when Mr. Kosygin met Presi-

Premier, Mr. Kosygin, was said to have dent Johnson at Glassboro it seemed that been their agreement on the text of a despite the Middle East crisis and continued disagreement over Vietnam, the Russians were ready after all to go ahead with the draft treaty.

It appears, however, that Mr. Kosygin no more has the last word on such matters than the Soviet delegate in Geneva or Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko. It looks as if the results of the Glassboro talks have simply been put into a general review of Soviet policy now in progress by the Soviet collective leadership. While this review is in originally worked out by the American progress, the Soviet delegate in Geneva is still waiting for instructions about the fate of the draft treaty.

May Dash Hopes

If the delay continues much longer it may dash the hopes of getting an agreed treaty ready for signature before the end of this year.

The pressures for speed in working out the treaty have the same causes as some countries have for delay and postponement for as long as possible. They are the desires of certain nonnuclear countries to keep open as long as possible the option of making nuclear weapons, and the increasing pressures on them, both military and political, to do so. In this respect, the strongest pressure is China's rapid development of nuclear weapons and its effect on India and eventually perhaps on Japan.

Not all of the countries most closely concerned are members of the Geneva conference, but those who are not, like West Germany and Japan, keep a close watch on the conference through observers. They are fully informed of the

put in ideas, enither by circulating un-official papers to members of the conference or by using one of their allies or friends as a channel to the conference Experienced international observers in Geneva believe that once a treaty has been completed, most of these nonnuclear countries will sign it. The pressure of world opinion, as well as the more direct pressure of the Great Powers, will be too strong for them to resist. But at the moment these possible dissidents are raising three kinds of objections and conditions, which vary according to their own particular international status and problems.

The group of objections is over the kind of inspection there should be of the nuclear installations of non-nuclear powers. Some of them, such as the West Germans, profess to fear both industrial espicnage and being reduced to a state of permanently inferior nuclear technology if their nuclear installations are subjected to the kind of inspection through the International Atomic Energy Agency which the Russians and Americans originally proposed. The West Germans and Italians want the inspection to be done through Euratom, the Common Market's nuclear counterpart, And they and other countries want the nuclear powers themselves to be subject to inspection.

Restrictions

Objections raised by countries like India and Sweden Include the argument that the non-proliferation treaty should place some restrictions on the nuclear as well as the non-nuclear powers. The Swedes particularity would like an extension of the partial nuclear test ban to cover all nuclear tests, including those underground.

But the main concern of Indiawhich unlike West Germany or Japan has no nuclear alliance for its defence and of Israel, is for some guarantee of security. In the case of India, it is largely a question of a nuclear guarantee against possible nuclear attack by China; in the case of Israel it is a question of a guarantee against non-nuclear as well as nuclear attack or the development of a new Middle East arms race. And what is true for India and Israel is equally true for Pakistan and Egypt.

India's problem may be the most urgent and also the most difficult. She has been trying to find some way of getting a guarantee which would involve both America and Russia.

Until this difficult formula can be found, it is likely that India will try to stave off the day when she has to choose whether or not to sign a non-proliferation treaty. Most observers believe that at the moment, if Russia and America agreed on a treaty and exerted their full pressure in New Delhi, India would sign, however reluctantly. But the longer the treaty is delayed the less certain this

It all started with a lie — a Russian lie.

In early May the Soviet government passed to Cairo the story of a large Israeli troop concentration on the Syrian border.

Over the following two weeks Cairo received further and more detailed information from Moscow indicating that an Israeli force of up to 11 brigades

At the time the Israelis had in fact no more than company (120 men) in this particular area, waiting in ambush for Syrian saboteurs.

It seems that the alarmed by the possibility Israel might be planning a punitive raid on Syria, wanted Nasser to commit his forces in Sinai in order to deter the Israelis from attacking. The crisis which was to lead war had already been building up for six months. In October and November of 1966 there had been an intensification of Arab terrorist activities against Israel by the El Fatah terrorist organization On Nov. 4, Syria and Egypt signed a defence agreement. There followed two incidents in which the Israelis undertook major punitive action. On Nov. 13, a large Israeli force including tanks and armored cars rolled over the ordania border and attacked Samu, a village of 4,000 people. Israel felt no great hostility towards Jordan carried out the raid in prepared to tolerate the use of Jordanian territory by the El Fatah organization.

At the beginning of April, 1967, the Israelis decided to knock out Syrian artillery which was bombarding Israeli workers in a demilitarized zone near the Sea of Galilee. In the resulting air battle of April 7 the Syrians lost six MiG fighters, a st six MiG fighters, a gnificant proportion of their

Gen. Rikhye immediately reported the Egyptian request to U Thant and retired to bed. The broadcasts of Cairo radio the next day made it clear that Gen. Rikhye had been asked to withdraw his men from the border and concentrate them inside the Gaza Strip. No mention was made of the U.N. forces at Sharm El-Sheikh. after receiving Fawzy's telegram, U Thant called on Mr. El Kony, the representative the United Nations, and informed him that a partial withdrawal of the force was impossible. Dag Hammarskjold had given a great deal of thought what should be done if ever Egypt denounced the agree ment. Indeed, it was the main topic of discussion between him and Nasser during a seven-hour conference on Nov.

Hammarskjold wrote a conf i dential aide-memoire Aug. 5, 1957, stating that he and President Nasser had

At a brief ceremony in Gaza on May 19 the blue and white flag of the United Nations was vered and UNEF was no more — an ignominious and abrupt demise.

Though U Thant has pointed out that the Hammarskjold memorandum was not an official United Nations document, it is interesting to see how far he departed from his predecessor's code of action.

In the event, however, the Egyptians had not waited for any formal response from U Thant. By 8 a.m. on May 17 they were already taking over UNEF observation posts along the border. On Tuesday, May 23, Levi Eshkol, the Israeli prime minister, warned that interference with Israeli shipping in the Strait of Tiran would be regarded as an act of war.

On the same day President Johnson declared that the blockade of Israeli shipping by Egypt was illegal and that the United States was firmly committed to support the integrity of all the nations of the Middle East. He went on to say: "We are dismayed at the hurried withdrawal without action by either the General Assembly or the Security Council." He is reported to have sent a personal message to Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin the previous weekend urging him to act in concert with the United States to get the Arabs and Israelis to exercise restraint.

Meanwhile, on Thursday, May 25, there were signs of nting pressure on Israeli prime minister for Israeli prime minister for Israel to "go it alone." President Johnson flew to Canada for the inside of a day to discuss the crisis with Lester Pearson. The same day the Egyptian defence minister, accompanied by a 10man delegation, arrived in Moscow to seek Russian support and material and was minister, Marshal Grechko.

On May 26, after keeping Eban waiting for most of the day, Mr. Johnson at last day, Mr. Johnson at last called him in for a talk. The president was disconcerted when Eban produced from his briefcase a file of documents which the Israelis considered to be evidence of a firm American commitment to up-hold the principle of "free and innocent passage" through the Gulf of Aqaba. Among these papers was the draft of a speech made by his immediate predecessor, Mrs. Golda Meir, to the United Nations General Assembly on March 1, 1957. This had been prepared jointly by Eban, at that time Israeli ambassador in Washington, and John Foster

Eban was also able to remind Mr. Johnson, during their 85-minute encounter, of the president's own record on

When Mr. Johnson was Senate Democratic leader in 1956-57 he had been strongly pro-Israel. He had burst into public anger when Dulles threatened Israel with sancunless she withdrew from Sharm El-Sheikh.

F In his talk with Eban, Mr. Johnson was full of friendly "I want to see that flag salling down those straits" — but would make no firm commitment.

For Mr. Johnson, the tactic seemed to be to stay cool and above all avoid a head-on collision with the Soviet Union. The Russian response relayed by his United Nations Ambassador, Arthur Gold berg, from the Russian delegate Federenko, and by the American ambassador in ellyn Thompson was reasonably encouraging But there was no chance of devising with the Russians a common solution. So the of Lyndon Johnson and Harold Wilson was to concoct a declaration by the maritime powers affirming the right of free passage through Eban was asked to procrastinate and give Washing-ton 10 days or a fortnight to plete this task. But the project was in trouble from the start. Hardly any of the maritime nations displayed the least eagerness to court trouble with the Arabs.

For his part, Eban thing might be achieved through negotiations; he has ed in private since the

Israel's international reputation it was essential that the diplomatic method be tested, even though it might be found wanting. He also maintained that Israel might have been accused of indecent haste had she struck the moment

The proposal under cussion was for a flotilla, preferrably under the auspices of the U.N., or failing pices of the U.N., or falling that of such maritime powers as would participate, to break the Egyptian blockade of the strait. The flotilla, which would no doubt be composed largely of U.S. and conceivably of British vessels, would escort the ships bound would escort the ships bound for Eilat through the Strait of Tiran. It was hoped that the demonstration of force made by the presence of this great armada would dissuade the Egyptians from opening fire. However, if they did so, the flotilla would make what was termed a "controlled recan be taken as meaning the taking out of the batteries at Sharm El-Sheikh. On the day of President Johnson's meeting with Eban, the situation in the Middle East took another decisive, turn. President Nasser, addressing the leaders of the Pan-Arab Federation of Trade "it will be total and the objective will be to destroy Israel. We feel confident that we can win and are ready now for a war with Israel . . . This time it will not be like 1956 because we were not fighting Israel at that time, but Britain and France." He called the United States "the

That night Nasser was called out of bed at 3:30 a.m. to hear an urgent message from the Soviet ambassador in Cairo. He told Nasser that Egypt was strongly advised not to initiate the fighting.

According to the Washington Post of June 15 the Russians had a substantial ground for concern. While wishing to avoid a confrontation, they were also informed of the inadequate condition of E gyptian military prepara-tions. A team of Soviet inspectors, checking Egyptian airfields, found pilots who had not been airborne for days. Egypt's dummy planes were unconvincing; and their real ones were massed to-gether where they would be easy targets.

Nasser's judgment was distorted by the enormous failure of his sycophantic intelligence service, which underestimated the enemy's strength. There is little reason to believe that Nasser was bent on a military showdown with Israel from the outset. However, as Eban has put it. "Nasser was like a man who had gone to Monte Carlo with 100 dollars and staked it at the roulette

On Tuesday, May 30, it was announced that Russia had informed Turkey of her inten-tion to send 10 warships through the Bosphorus into the Mediterranean during the following week. Under the Montreux Convention of 1936 warships from foreign coun-Turkish government eight days in advance. Meanwhile, the authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram reported that a United States tanker flying back from the Strait of Tiran after a warning shot had been fired across her bows. In Washington and at the United States embassy in Cairo all knowledge of such a ship in the area was denied. But the most dramatic event of May 30 was the unexpected arrival in Cairo of King Hussein of Jordan who, after a stay of only six hours, signed a defence agreemen with President Nasser. This sudden turn of events prised the Egyptian people as much as foreigners. The two men had for long been at loggerheads, President Nasser sein in the past as a traitor to the Arab cause.

The defence pact of May 30 was undoubtedly the turning-tween Egypt and Jordan could scarcely be tolerated by Israel. For Israel would now be exposed to attack at its nost vulnerable point; the soft under-belly" where Jordanian territory formed salient into Israel and provided a hostile base for attack only 12 miles from the Mediterranean coast. Under the defence pact, the Egyp-tian chief of staff would command both Jordanian and U.A.R. forces in the event of war, so establishing a pincer which could be manipulated

Thus the talkers were being overtaken by events. While President Johnson and Prime Minister Harold Wilson were the world seeking to obtain of other maritime nations for concerted action to open the Strait of Tiran, if need be by force, the problem of the strait had become a minor issue in the eyes of Israel. A threat to Israel's shipping and access to the east was one thing: The direct and deadly threat of an Arab military build-up along her borders

Ben-Guriou in retirement, the Israeli people turned now to one man — General Moshe Dayan, the Sinai victor of 1956, whose black eyepatch was a personal and national medium of the statement of t trademark of valor. From Dayan they would accept a decision to fight or to wait with complete conviction that, whever it should be, the decision had been taken for

In 1960 Dayan had become a member of the Knesset, Israel's Parliament, and was culture in Ben-Gurion's government. When Ben-Gurion seceded from Eshkol's ruling Mapai party in June, 1965 and formed the small but influential Rafi group, Dayan

Two Main Questions

Shimon Peres, one of the leading lights of the Rafi Party, has described the problems which confronted Israel in the days leading up to the war: "There were the executed to be resolved—the questions to be resolved — the decision to go or not to go and secondly who should bear the responsibility for that de-cision. There was growing resentment in the country and in the army, not because the government hadn't decided on war — but because it had taken no decision." Rafi was, broadly, the party of the "hawks," while the "doves" put their trust in Eshkol and muster 50 of the Knesset's 120 votes, and which aimed to overthrow Eshkol.

Discussions with the government went on vainly up to and throughout Wednesday, May 31, in an attempt to get Dayan accepted in a position of authority, either as prime minister or minister of defence. Dayan was pessimistic and depressed. Eshkol was prepared to have him in but only in an advisory capacity, offering him the deputy premiership or membership of the government's inner committee for defence, which consisted of 13 people. Both positions would have involved responsibility without power. This was something that neither Dayan nor the Rafi leadership was prepared to Then at 3 p.m. on Thursday, there was a meeting of the secretariat of Mapai at which 24 people spoke. Of these, 19 supported Dayan and only five backed Allon, a former chief of staff and now minister of labor. At 7 p.m. Eshkol and delegates of Rafi met, and it was agreed that Dayan should have the defence ministry. This meeting lasted no mo than 10 minutes. An hour later the Rafi leadership met in Ben-Gurion's house. After two hours of discussion Ben-Gurion approved Dayan's appointment. By 11 o'clock the same night the cabinet met and Dayan's inclusion as defence minister was among the three additions made.

Controversial Issue

It is now a controversial issue in Israeli politics as to who should be given credit for the decision to strike, and for the successful conduct of the war. Dayan's admirers claim that when he entered the cabinet the decision to fight had yet to be taken, and add that no detailed plan of attack had been worked out. Eshkol loyalists tend to present contradictory evidence.

Brigadier-General Ezer Weizman has said that when Davan became minister "he bility that the decision to go might not be taken." He claims that the Eshkol government was too fearful to make the decision without Dayan. They wanted Dayan included so that if the whole thing ended in disaster they would not have to carry the Eban, and the minister of labor, Allon, recall events differently. Eban says that the decision to fight had been reached by June 1: It was dictated by the pact between Nasser and Hussein. Allon agrees. He says that prior to the defence pact there was a division in the cabinet, a majority still hoping for a diplomatic solution. But after was just a question of timing.

Anyone can owe a couple of thousand dollars on a car. Getting the thing paid for is always a little harder. You know how it is: after two or three years you begin to get the feeling that trading the old one in on a new one will actually save you money.

Shifting gears is like eating sauerkraut. Some people just can't develop a taste for it.

And that's been the trouble with compact imports. The automatic lovers didn't want to shift and the popular small cars didn't have automatics. Not until Datsun put a smooth Borg-Warner automatic transmission into their new 96 hp 1600 sedan.

Now the automatic people really have something. Quick, sure handling; power to climb any mountain road and more comfort than a small car ever gave anybody. Plus 100,000 mile dependability. And they love it.

Looking for a first-class, low-priced automatic? Or a first-class, low-priced standard shift? Drive a Datsun then decide.

HIGHLAND GAMES

For Crowd-Pleasing Meet Gail Heroine of the Day Winning Auckland Trophy

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Pipers from B.C, Alberta Vashinton, Oregon and Caliornia marched with swinging kilts through sunny Macdonald Park Saturday afternoon in a grand finale to Victoria's 30th nnual Highland Games.

Their glowing tartans made a bold splash of color against the lush green grass and the flags which fluttered overhead — the Maple Leaf, the Stars and Stripes, the Union Jack and the flag of St. Andrew.

And the triumphal procession vas applauded by more than 700 spectators - many of them non-Scots from far and wide.

HIGHEST) POINTS Miss Gail Bamford, 14-yearold daughter of A. H. Bamford president of Victoria Highland Games Association, was heroine of the day. She won the William Auckland trophy for highest points in all the events.

Angus MacKenzie, also of Victoria, won the open "We are proud to welcome so

GREATER UNITY'

The games were officially opened by L. J. Wallace, chairman of the B.C. Centennial Committee. He wore a green beret with the centennial tartan approved by the Lord Lion King of Arms in Edinburgh.

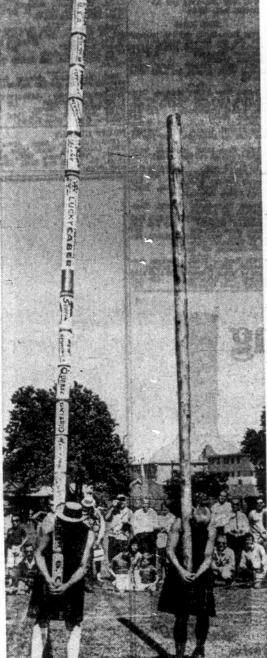

"The provinces of Canada are entering the second century of our history with a greater understanding of each other's problems and a greater unity han we have ever had before, Mr. Wallace said.

Mr. Bamford said he believed that when the next century of British Columbia's history is written Mr. Wallace will be known as Mr. Centennial.

Mr. Bamford introduced Alex McLeod Baird, past-president of Victoria Highland Games Association, Ian Duncan, immediate past-president and chieftain of the 30th annual games; and James Weir, president of the Sons of Scotland. PRIOR TO 1990

The first Highland Games in Victoria are believed to have been held prior to 1900 at the old Caledonian grounds, and were jointly organized by the Sir William Wallace Society and the Caledonian Society.

In 1938 the Victoria Highland Games Association was formed and the games have been held

CENTENNIAL CABER, 19.67 feet long and weighing 100 pounds, was turned by a non-Scot, Richard Gilda, of Bellingham, at Victoria Highland Games. Mr. Gilda also manufactured the caber and will have his name inscribed on it. He qualified to toss the Centennial caber by tossing the standard 18-foot caber a distance of 44 feet, beating all other contestants, including Scots. (Times photo by Irving Strickland.)

Approval Expected On $80,000 Study

The proposed 52-acre urban renewal scheme for Sunday by charter aircraft to Victoria's waterfront faced its first hurdle this afternoon at a special meeting of city council.

Council, trimmed to five members by vacations, was expected to endorse the proposal which would launch the first phase of a feasibility study.

Aldermen Geoffrey Edgelow, Hugh Ramsay and Lloyd Clarkson were expected to miss the 2 o'clock

The survey, technically described as an application to the federal government to share study expenses, is expected to cost about $80,000, with the costs shared equally by the city and the federal government.

Federal officials have indicated that approval of the survey will quickly follow the official application.

Provincial approval to conduct the detailed survey is also required, although the provin-cial government does not share the costs of the initial survey.

Are You in the Dark? Lighted Pen Can Help

By Penny Saver

During my recent house-cleaning spree I've been making occasional forays into the attic where I've rediscovered all kinds of invaluable possessions. Ice-skates that belonged to great-grandmother, Junior's finger-paintings from kindergarten, a trunk filled with souvenirs from my own school days, and a box filled with tin-types of long-departed relatives whom no one can . they're all there. Again this summer I haven't the heart to get rid of these treasures, but some day I know that I'm either going to have to open a museum or throw them away Maybe I'll get organized next summer.

Speaking of getting organized, I recently remembered to buy our baby-sitter a little birthday gift. As she's a young university student, I wanted to give her something that might help her with her work. Many evenings during the school year I've asked her what work she's doing, and she explains that she's recopying notes she took in a dark lecture theatre. While on a recent shopping trip I found a gadget that she is certain to appreciate—a lighted pen. This pen is designed to write in the dark... it operates on its own battery, and the light switches on automatically when the pen is in use.

Both pencil and ink refills are available for this handy gadget, and it operates on standard size bulbs and battery. Priced at $2, complete with battery, this would be a practical item for anyone who must write in the dark—nurses, doctors, taxi drivers, waitresses, photographers, laboratory technicians will find it invaluable.

Penny's still concentrating on her summer cleaning program department. We've been collecting records for years, and some of the jackets on these are pretty ragged. If the jackets on the records in your collection could stand repair, you'll like the self-stick cloth tape I found. This tape is plastic-coated for long wear, and a large roll of it is priced at 59 cents. It will also do the trick for mending book jackets, repairing car seat covers, mending plastic toys, reinforcing window shades or even as decoration.

There is a smart leather purse sitting at the back of my closet that I've been meaning to mend for years. The leather's in good shape, but the stitching gave out, so I've been inspired to repair it. In one shop I found a bargain package of assorted cooking Can Be Fun inches that will do all sorts of odd repair jobs such as this. There are 25 different needles in this pack, all different sizes and strengths, for every kind of sewing you can think of. The entire package is priced at 25 cents.

Please give me a call at 382-3131 if you'd like to know where I shopped for these items.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

something big going for it. It hasn't even seen the air of premiere week in the fall but it has already been sold by - CBS-TV to 18 foreign

The Michael Connors vehicle is of at least six police and detective series scheduled for exposure next season.

The others are Dragnet, Ironside, The FBI, The Felony Squad and N.Y.P.D.

The schedules are also bogged down in westerns, old movies, variety shows and situation

Television has thus come around full circle with program lineups reminiscent of entertainment some 15 but there will be very little variation in theme.

Significantly missing are the James Bond type spy

The only ones with the spy theme remaining are CBS' Mission Impossible and NBC's pair of I Spy and The Man From U.N.C.L.E.

The panel shows have also done the big fade. Gone are the likes of To Tell the Truth, I've Got a Secret and What's My Line. There are no other such shows in prime time in the new season worthy of mention.

The variety show lineup will be added to with several promising entries. Ed Sullivan continues to roll on as does Jacke Gleason, Hollywood Palace and Red Skelton. Several of the others include Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Smothers Brothers, Kraft Music Hall, Carol Burnett and, how could I possibly forget, Lawrence Welk.

It will be almost like reliving the old days of television. The program titles different but an isn't-this-where-we-came-in look about it.

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ 10. Freight 12. Advancement I have a fine letter to the 14. Chess-player parent of a cerebral palsied child, written by Mary Huber, Ph.D., direc-

His muscular co-ordination was so poor that his mother still had to feed him. He could not chew well, and so he did better with soft, strained His mother had to encourage him to use his teeth and jaws, as we'll as his tongue, so that all three might get the necessary exercise, and thus to become active parts of his speech mechanism. The mother had to help her child to learn to blow, swallow, suck through a straw, breathe through his nose—instead of his mouth— and above all things, she had to keep talking to him, reading to him, singing to him, and playing with him. The more the mother talks to her child, the sooner he is likely to learn to speak.

The child should be taught every day to notice more things by looking at them, hearing, touching, smelling and tasting them. The mother should take the child to the window and point out to him the change in the sky, the weather, the trees, plants, the seasons, and anything new that appears. She should teach him to understand sounds, like the ticking of a clock, the steaming of a tea-kettle, the door-bell, the telephone, sounds of wind, rustling of the leaves, raindrops on the window-pane, bird-sounds, little animal sounds, a train whistle, and then try to get him to imitate the sounds.

Try to find out if your child can hear well enough. Teach the child to sense things with his hands, tell him about

An interesting point is that Your child will not regard himself as a tragic phenome-non unless you do." As Dr. Huber says, "It is the child's effort that must receive recognition rather than the successful accomplishment of any act, for only through constant encouragement will the effort be repeated until practice and maturity make it possible to accomplish the

Through the summer, Neptune will be in the southeastern sky after sunset. But you cannot find it. No human eyes have ever seen it without help. Astronomers needed super tele-scopes to discover it. They have used other sky-spying instru-ments and a lot of clever math to figure out more of its

The two giant planets of our Solar System are Jupiter and Solar System are Jupiter and Saturn. They are much farther from the sun than we are, but when they appear in our skies, they outshine the brightest stars. Way out beyond the two giants are two much smaller planets, almost like a pair of twins. The closest one is about 100 times farther from the sun 20 times farther from the sun T than we are. It is the cold, outer planet Uranus and if you 3. outer planet Uranus and if you know just where to look, you may be able to see it as a pale, dim dot among the stars. Its twin is the planet Neptune—and Neptune is about 30 times farther from the sun than we

Neptune is 3½ times wider than the earth and if it were a than the earth and if it were a hollow globe it could swallow 60 earth-sized planets. The dimmest star our eyes can see is 34 times brighter than faraway Neptune. But with the help of C. powerful telescopes, it has been observed and photographed. Its path has been traced against the background of sparkling stars Astronomers have figured that it takes 165 earth years to make one yearly orbit around the sun. Its immense orbit is more than 5,500 million miles wide and the lazy plane dawdles along almost six times slower than we do. D

Heaviest Planet

The heaviest planet for its K size, is our little earth. The two giants and the faraway twins giants and the faraway twins are made of much lighter materials. Astronomers figure, that these four outer planets are made very much alike. Each has a solid rocky core, heavy and maybe quite hot. Around the core are layers and layers of very light materials. We think that Neptune has a heavy core no bigger than the moon. 4. Repudiate row about pig (6) The rest of the big globe is very light. The surface may be a through alienation of affection (12)

Neptune's years are 165 times longer than ours, but its days are more than eight hours shorter than earth days. You would expect a planet so far from the sun to be shudderingly cold — and so it is. Its temperature is around 352 degrees below zero. You also to have a powerful surface gravity — but this is not so. If a 100 pound earth 100 pound earth boy ever reached the surface of Neptune, he would weigh no more than 112 pounds. This surprisingly low surface gravity is because Neptune is made of light materials. Its total weight is only about 21/2 times as heavy as an equal amount of water.

Neptune was discovered 121 years ago and since then it has traveled only % of the way around the sun.

Why do broken light bulbs The soft popping sound from broken light bulb says "Danger!" Beware of dagger-sharp, thin, splintered glass. At east, that is what it would say if it were smart enough to care. actually, of course, the popping sound is not really a word, it is the noise made by a puff of air rushing to fill up an almost T empty space. The pocket was the bulb before it was broken. It was tightly sealed from the air in the room.

Fire is fed by ordinary oxygen in the ordinary air. And fire gets so hot that it melts even metals. The light from a bulb comes from heating the fine filament of metal wire inside it. We want it hot enough to glow, but not hot enough to melt the metal. So the oxygen and air are taken out of the bulb. Some gases refuse to feed fire, so a B trace of these non-burning gases is sealed inside the bulb. It is much thinner than the air outside. And all gases mingle together, trying to spread them-selves evenly. When the bulb breaks, the air in the room puffs in with a pop to thicken up the thin mixture of gases that was trapped inside the glassy prison. The breaking glass may add a small crackle that makes the pop louder.

'LBJ Played Politics In Riots

DETROIT UPI) - Gov. George Romney today ac-cused President Johnson of deliberately delaying dispatch of federal troops into Detroit's riot-torn streets so he could "play politics in a period of tragedy and riot."

Romney, a potential Rupublican foe of Johnson in the 1968 presidential election, spent nearly an hour in a conference explaining step by step the events leading up to the ordering of paratroopers into Detroit early last Tuesday.

Romney said he waited 22 hours before the administration finally agreed to his pleas. And he suggested that lives could have been saved if Johnson had acted sooner.

"I think the president of the United States played politics in a period of tragedy and riot," Romney said.

Romney was asked why the president did so.

But France's call for freedom is not necessarily the same as Quebec independence, a cabinet spokesman

The communique followed France's longest cabinet meet-ing on record at which President de Gaulle reported on his visit to Canada during which he aroused a furore with his "Long live free Quebec" speech. Today's statement said:

DETROIT UPI) - Gov. George Romney today accused President Johnson of deliberately delaying dispatch of federal troops into Detroit's riot-torn streets so he could "play politics in a period of tragedy and riot."

Romney, a potential Rupublican foe of Johnson in the 1968 presidential election, spent nearly an hour in a news conference explaining step by step the events paratroopers into Detroit early last Tuesday.

Romney said he waited 22 hours before the administration finally agreed to his pleas. And he suggested that lives could have been saved it Johnson had acted sooner.

"I think the president of the United States played politics in a period of tragedy and riot," Romney said. Romney was asked why the

NEW YORK (AP) - A cargo-carrying jetliner set down at Kennedy Airport after a flight from London Saturday and it wasn't until the landing that anyone knew the plane carried one item of excess baggage: An adventuresome, 14 - year - old stowaway.

The boy, identified as Stephen Wilkins, of Grimsby, England, was dressed in mod style-striped pants, boots and shirt without a tie - when he stepped out of the airplane carrying his suitcase, ap-parently planning an all-
